

Cattails on a Hill: Reimagining Individuals in Community

Priscilla Stuckey

Associate Professor, Humanities, Prescott College

Wooden cattails on a hilltop lawn - what's wrong with this picture? Priscilla Stuckey suggests that the inability to imagine accurate eco-communities stems from the same patterns of thought that in this society, make human communities challenging as well.

In this talk, Stuckey will offer some thoughts on reimagining individuals in community and will read selected passages from her new book, Kissed by a Fox: And Other Stories of Friendship in Nature (Counterpoint, 2012).

Priscilla Stuckey holds a Ph.D. in religious studies and feminist theory from the Graduate Theological Union at the University of California, Berkeley. She uses her own experiences of encountering trees, birds, and animals to develop more hopeful cultural stories about nature, including our own nature.

Tuesday, January 15, 2013
12:00 - 1:30 p.m.

Wrigley Hall, Room 481 (lunch will be provided)
Arizona State University, Tempe campus

RSVP link: Download any free QR-Code reader app to your smart phone. Scan this code and it will take you directly to the RSVP page.

RSVP: sustainabilityevents@asu.edu

Parking and directions: sustainability.asu.edu/directions

For more information about this and other events, visit sustainability.asu.edu/events