

The Hunger Games: The Global Race to Build Civil Society

Fron Nahzi

*Global Business Development Director
Walton Sustainability Solutions Initiatives*

For the past twenty years, Western governments and private foundations have spent billions to implement democratic order in emerging democracies. The West's cornerstone to civil society development is the formation of NGOs and the development of donor systems found in most Western countries (i.e., foundations, endowments, and corporate social responsibility programs). In this talk, Nahzi will discuss how public and privately funded civil society development programs are established and implemented in emerging democracies and he will take a deeper look into their effectiveness.

Fron Nahzi has more than 20 years of international development experience. He has worked and lived in more than 20 countries in the Balkans, Central and Eastern Europe, Caucuses, Africa, Oceania, and Southeast Asia.

Tuesday, April 29, 2014
9:30 - 11:00 a.m.

Wrigley Hall, Room 481
Arizona State University, Tempe campus
(light breakfast will be provided)

RSVP link: Download any free QR-Code reader app to your smart phone. Scan this code and it will take you directly to the RSVP page.

RSVP: sustainabilityevents@asu.edu

Parking and directions: sustainability.asu.edu/directions

For more information about this and other events, visit sustainability.asu.edu/events

The Sustainability Series is presented by ASU's Global Institute of Sustainability.